

GARRETT ENGLE | TENNESSEE (CHATTANOOGA)

GOLF & óp

<https://silosolo.com/911592>

Summary

This Silo talks about the difficulties of the recruitment process due to changing rules, the importance of transparency in standing out, focusing on the mental aspect of golf, choosing a coach that matches the player's practice style, and not being afraid to consider lower-ranked schools for golf success.

Silo sample questions

- What was the biggest difficulty during the recruitment process?
- What did the speaker do to stand out during the recruitment process?
- What aspect of the game did the speaker focus on during their recruitment?
- What did the speaker emphasize as the most important thing in choosing a college for golf?
- What advice did the speaker give to aspiring golfers in terms of choosing a college?

Topics

recruitment

standing out

mental aspect

coach selection

college choice

Key Takeaways

- The biggest difficulty was the change in recruitment rules, which made it hard to communicate with coaches and caused the player to restart the recruitment process as a junior.
- The speaker stood out by being transparent and putting their bad tournaments and experiences on their resume, which helped coaches see the full picture of the player.
- The speaker focused more on the mental aspect of golf, seeking advice on dealing with bad shots, bad breaks, nerves, and rebounding from mistakes.
- The most important thing in choosing a college was finding a coach who matched the player's practice style and philosophy.
- The speaker advised not to be afraid to consider schools viewed as lower-ranked, emphasizing that professional success in golf can be achieved from a variety of college programs.

Click here for the full transcript

Click here for the source